

FedEx Reference Note and Package Labeling

Cut out the FedEx reference note below and tape it to the side of any live reptile/aquatics package.

It is IMPORTANT that you clearly indicate quantity and species and label your live package appropriately, according to both Federal and State laws. This includes meeting the IATA labeling requirement and the Lacey Act labeling requirement. Failure to label your live shipments accurately and/or completely may result in delays, inspection, confiscation, and/or monetary fines. Florida and California are especially vigilant about inspections and citations. It is YOUR responsibility, and it only takes a moment!

To meet the IATA labeling requirement you must check/circle the appropriate Live Animal Indicator- Aquatics or Reptiles.

To meet the Lacey Act labeling requirement you must list your species by quantity, and both scientific and common name. Florida is requiring BOTH scientific and common name listings, complying with the Florida requirement will ensure that you are labeled appropriately throughout the country. Failure to label completely may result in delays, confiscation, and/or fines.

Completely cover the reference note with tape to prevent tears or weather wear (or use a label-envelope).

In case of questions regarding ShipYourReptiles/ShipYourAquatics account status, live animal shipping certification or residential shipping allowance, the note below instructs FedEx employees to contact the FedEx Live Animal Desk through their internal system for clarification.

The note for FedEx agents is provided for reference only. FedEx employees are not required to look up this account info for each shipment. This note is simply to alleviate any rare concerns they might have, while also ensuring proper labeling of species and quantity for any inspection or audit.
